The Hand of the Cause, Enoch Olinga was born on June 24, 1926 in Teso which is in northeast Uganda. Enoch received his early education at Tilling. He later went to school at Ngora, and to high school in Mbale district. In 1941, when he was 15, Enoch was drafted into the British Army Education Corps and went to Nairobi. He later served in the East African King's Rifles Corps in South East Asia. After the War, in 1946, Enoch returned to Uganda, where he began work with the Government Department of public relations and Welfare, stationed in Soroti and Mbale. In the next few years he wrote two books in his own language, Ateso, as well as SOCIAL AND ECONOMIC PROBLEMS - THEIR SOLUTION. He trained as an economist and worked for the government as a translator. In 1951 Enoch heard about the Baha'i Faith from a friend. At this time there were virtually no Baha'is in Africa. The British National Spiritual Assembly, at the behest of Shoghi Effendi, had launched the two-year Africa campaign in 1950 to take the Baha'i teachings to the whole continent and in 1951 Mr. and Mrs. Musa Banani, their daughter Violette, her husband Ali Nakhjavani and their daughter Bahiyiyih settled in Kampala.....(see back)
